Gluten-free ingredients · Nut-free

Lentils give plant protein, about 15 g of fibre per serve, iron, zinc and folate, with just a little lean beef for flavour. Five sofrito vegetables plus pumpkin add beta-carotene and vitamin C to a cheap, filling pot.

Diet notes: Vegan if you leave out the cheese, hard-boiled eggs and lean beef; Vegetarian with a swap for the cheese and lean beef; Dairy-free if you leave out the cheese.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Soak the lentils in cold water for about 4 hours (optional; unsoaked lentils just need longer), then drain and discard the water. 1:00
2. Heat the oil in a large pot over high heat. If using beef, brown it with the garlic, oregano, bay, paprika and cumin. Without meat, simply start the spices and garlic in the oil. 5:11
3. Add the onion, zucchini, capsicum, carrot and celery and fry over high heat for about 12 minutes to build a deep sofrito. When it starts to stick, splash in a little boiling water and scrape up the browned bits. 5:37
4. Add the lentils and pumpkin with just enough boiling water to cover. Return to the boil, then lower the heat, cover and simmer for about 15 minutes, adding a little water only if it looks dry. 6:46
5. Stir in the rice with a little more water if needed, cover and cook 10–12 minutes more. Lightly crush the pumpkin so the stew is creamy rather than soupy, and season with salt. 8:09
6. Serve very hot in deep bowls topped with slices of hard-boiled egg, parsley or coriander, a little grated cheese and, if you like, a few drops of olive oil. 9:00

> Tip Soak the lentils about 4 hours first if you can (not counted in the time). Leave out the beef for a vegetarian stew; the cook says potato can replace the rice. Freezes well; thin with water when reheating.
