Vegan Gluten-free ingredients

A mild, chilli-free kimchi with no fish sauce or added sugar (the sweetness is from pear and jujube), at about 20 kcal a quarter-cup serve. Like all kimchi it is salty, about 450 mg sodium a serve, so keep portions small.

Diet notes: Low carb (2.9 g net carbs) but not keto: 27% of the energy is from fat, and keto meals get about 60% or more.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Score the base of the 3 lb napa cabbage and pull it apart into halves. Rinse under cold water so every leaf is wet, then sprinkle ⅓ cup kosher salt evenly between the leaves. Leave 1½–2 hours, turning every 20 minutes. 0:43
2. Rinse the cabbage in cold water a couple of times, cut each half into quarters, trim off the core and leave it to drain. 1:40
3. Mix the carrot, buchu, red pepper, chestnut and jujube strips with about 1 tsp salt. 2:10
4. Blend the pear, onion, garlic and ginger until creamy. Stir 2 tbsp + 2 tsp kosher salt into 4 cups water, put the purée in a cotton pouch or cheesecloth and squeeze its juice into the brine; discard the pulp. 3:51
5. Tuck the filling, a few pine nuts and some silgochu between the leaves of each cabbage quarter, fold it over and pack the quarters tightly into a glass jar or crock. Pour in the brine so the cabbage is completely covered. 5:35
6. Cover and leave on the counter for 1½–3 days (faster in a warm room) until the brine tastes sour like a pickle, then refrigerate. It keeps about a month. 6:20
7. To serve, cut a quarter crosswise into 2-inch pieces and serve cold in small dishes with some of the juice. 7:03

> Tip Makes about 2¾ lb kimchi in about 5½ cups of brine: roughly 26 quarter-cup serves (our estimate). No Korean pear? Use a Bosc pear. Skip the chestnuts if you can't find fresh ones. The juice is as salty as the kimchi.
