Method

TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Season 1½ cups dashi with 1 tsp light soy sauce and 2 tsp mirin, then add the 2 beaten eggs and mix well (the ratio is 1 egg to ¾ cup dashi). Always strain the mixture through a sieve for a silky texture. 2:22
2. Remove the shiitake stems, halve the caps and slice them thinly. 4:38
3. Cut the kamaboko into small pieces, halve the prawns and cut the chicken small, then sprinkle the chicken with a little salt. Cut the shungiku leaves into small pieces. Avoid hard, chunky fillings. 5:27
4. Divide the fillings among 4 cups or small bowls and pour in the egg mixture. Pop any bubbles on the surface with a chopstick so the tops set smooth. 7:25
5. Bring a little over ½ inch of water to the boil in a lidded frying pan. Stand the cups in it, lay a paper towel over them to catch drips, cover and steam on medium heat for 2 minutes. 9:15
6. Turn the heat right down so the water barely bubbles and steam about 13 minutes more (15 in all), until the custards are set but still wobble. 10:48
7. Top each with a sliver of yuzu peel and serve hot. 13:46

> Tip Serves 4 as a side. Any dashi works, or chicken stock for a Chinese-style version; swap the fillings for scallops, white fish or oysters. Skip the kamaboko to keep it free of processed fish cake.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Japanese) shows every step.
