Method

TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Wash the chillies and carrots. Slice the carrots on the diagonal, cut the half onion into chunks and cut the chillies into strips (if you leave them whole, prick each one so the vinegar gets in). 1:43
2. Heat about 2 tbsp oil over high heat, add the onion and garlic and stir for a minute until glassy. 3:27
3. Add the chillies and carrots and keep stirring over high heat for about 5 minutes. 4:12
4. Season with coarse salt, the sugar and the crushed marjoram, then add the bay leaves, peppercorns and cloves and pour in the vinegar and water. 4:29
5. Bring to the boil, taste and adjust the salt, cover and cook 1–2 minutes more so they stay crunchy. Turn off the heat and leave covered for 5 minutes. 5:32
6. Eat them straight away, or let them cool and keep them in a clean jar in the fridge, where they keep for months and taste better after a day. 6:44

> Tip Makes about 5 cups. Keep in a clean jar in the fridge with the vegetables under the brine. The salt isn't measured in the video (we estimate 2 tsp); seed the chillies for less heat.
