Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Chop the onion and garlic, slice the leek, and peel the zucchini and cut it into large chunks. Break the cauliflower into large florets and rinse them. 1:36
2. Heat 3 tbsp olive oil in a stockpot over medium heat and sauté the onion, leek and garlic 3–4 minutes, stirring, until the onion is translucent. 3:26
3. Add the zucchini and cook 2–3 minutes more, then stir in the thyme with salt and pepper. 3:58
4. Add the cauliflower and just enough water to barely cover it, bring to a boil over high heat, then cover and simmer over medium-low 5–10 minutes, until a toothpick goes in with a little resistance. 4:45
5. Let it cool a couple of minutes, then drain the vegetables, keeping the cooking liquid. 5:46
6. Purée the vegetables in a food processor, adding the reserved liquid ½ cup at a time until creamy (about 1½ cups). Taste, season and serve with a drizzle of olive oil and parsley. 6:06

> Tip Blend in the cooking liquid a little at a time; it's the liquid, not cream, that makes it silky.
