Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Drain the soaked beans and put them in a pot with a piece of onion, a bay leaf and 2 garlic cloves. Cover with water, add a little salt, put the lid on and cook for 40–45 minutes until tender. 0:44
2. Cut the cuttlefish into strips (not too thin) and remove the eyes. Toss with salt, pepper and a drizzle of olive oil and set aside. 1:16
3. Chop the onion and dice the bacon. In a separate pan, sauté them in a drizzle of olive oil with 2 bay leaves so the onion softens while the bacon browns. 1:53
4. Meanwhile dice the ½ red pepper as finely as you can. Add it to the pan, then the chopped garlic, and keep cooking until everything starts to caramelise and catch on the bottom. 2:59
5. Stir in 2 tbsp tomato pulp and let it cook down for a few minutes, scraping up the browned bits. 4:00
6. Add the cuttlefish and the white wine, season with a little more salt and pepper, and cook for 10–15 minutes until the cuttlefish is nearly tender. 4:32
7. Add the cooked beans with a little of their cooking liquid. Blend a small portion of the beans with some liquid and stir it in to make the sauce creamy, then bring to the boil. 5:14
8. Stir in plenty of chopped coriander and serve, with extra coriander on top. 6:33

> Tip Serves 7 (our estimate, about 350 g a bowl; he says it makes plenty). He serves it with white rice; a green salad keeps it lower in carbs. 2 jars of cooked beans, drained, can replace the dried beans. Skip the bacon for a pescatarian stew.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Portuguese) shows every step.
