Gambas a la Plancha with Aioli

20 min · Serves 4 · 310 kcal a serve · Video 5:37 · Bart's Fish Tales

Pescatarian · Gluten-free ingredients · Dairy-free · Nut-free

Cooked in their shells on hot salt, the prawns need no oil at all: five give about 22 g of protein, most of a day's selenium and over half a day's vitamin B12. Almost all the fat is in the aioli, so dip lightly.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Make the aioli: crush the garlic to a smooth paste in a mortar, mix in the egg yolk and a pinch of salt, then add the sunflower oil drop by drop, stirring all the time, until thick. Season with lemon juice and pepper and chill. 0:33
2. Spread a layer of coarse sea salt over the base of a large heavy frying pan and heat it over medium-high for about 2 minutes, until the salt is very hot. 1:47
3. Use whole raw king prawns with heads and shells on, ideally MSC- or ASC-certified. Lay them on the hot salt and press them in gently so one side is covered. 2:17
4. Cook 2–3 minutes until the underside turns red, then turn them over and cook another 2–3 minutes. The shells crisp while the meat steams in its own juices. 3:21
5. Serve straight away with the aioli. Twist off the heads, peel the shells, dip in the aioli and add a few drops of lemon if you like. 4:29

> Tip Serves 4 as a tapa (5 prawns each). The meat doesn't taste salty because the shells protect it. For carnivore, skip the aioli and lemon. The aioli uses raw egg yolk. Give everyone a finger bowl of warm water with a lemon slice.

The method is a summary in our words — the video shows every step.
