Italian Grandma's Pasta with Broccoli

30 min · Serves 6 · 421 kcal a serve · Video 14:55 · Buon-A-Petitti

Nut-free

A Puglian-style family pasta where broccoli makes up a big share of the plate: each serve has over 100 g of broccoli for vitamin C, vitamin K and fibre, with olive oil as the main fat and only a little cheese.

Diet notes: Vegetarian with a vegetarian hard cheese instead of the pecorino Romano (traditionally made with animal rennet).

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Bring a large pot of water to the boil, salt it and cook the small broccoli pieces until tender. 1:26
2. Meanwhile, warm the olive oil in a wide pan and gently fry the chopped garlic with the hot pepper flakes, without letting the garlic brown. 2:30
3. Lift the broccoli into the garlic oil with a splash of its cooking water and let it cook a few minutes more until it breaks down almost like a cream. Keep the broccoli water boiling. 4:19
4. Cook the pasta in the same broccoli water until just al dente, then drain and toss it into the broccoli pan, adding a little more cooking water if it looks dry. 6:02
5. Season with black pepper and salt to taste, stir in the grated Pecorino Romano and serve with a little extra cheese on top. 7:26

> Tip Serves about 6 (1 lb of pasta; our estimate). Use wholewheat pasta for more fibre, or add a can of cannellini beans for extra protein. Reheat leftovers with a splash of water.
