Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Put the beef chunks into a dry pot with no oil, sprinkle with coarse salt, cover and set over the heat so the meat releases its juices. 0:55
2. Meanwhile slice the onions not too thinly, roughly chop the garlic and ginger, and chop the tomatoes. 1:20
3. When the juices have completely evaporated and the pot is dry, add the oil and stir until the beef browns. 3:02
4. Add the onions and stir until they soften, then the garlic and the ginger. 3:17
5. Stir in the curry powder, then the tomatoes, and finish with a few turns of black pepper. 3:52
6. Cover the beef with water and bring to the boil, then lower to medium-low and simmer for about 2 hours, until the water has fully cooked away and the meat falls apart into shreds. 4:35
7. Scatter with snipped parsley and serve, with a little chilli paste on the side if you like. 5:44

> Tip Serves 5 (our estimate). Eaten in Madagascar with rice and chilli paste; cauliflower rice or a green salad keep it lower in carbs. It keeps well in the fridge for 3 days and reheats well.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in French) shows every step.
