Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Heat the oven to 250°F. Spread the raw almonds on a rimmed baking sheet and warm them for about 15 minutes, until heated through and golden (8–10 minutes if they are already roasted). 0:25
2. Tip the warm almonds into a food processor, put the lid on and pulse a few times to break them up, then let it run. 1:00
3. Process for 15–20 minutes, stopping now and then to scrape down the sides and to rest the motor if it gets hot. It goes from almond meal, to a sticky paste, to a ball. 1:18
4. When it forms a ball, add the salt if you like it salted, then process one last time until creamy and smooth. 2:10
5. Spoon into clean airtight jars and keep in the fridge, where it lasts up to a month. 2:47

> Tip Warm almonds release their oil and blend faster. The cook's written recipe uses 1/4 tsp salt. Makes about 1 1/2 cups. Stir into yoghurt or spread on apple slices.
