Japchae Glass Noodles with Vegetables

45 min · Serves 8 · 185 kcal a serve · Video 8:04 · Jia Choi

Dairy-free · Nut-free

Only 100 g of beef for the whole batch, so the dish is mostly onion, carrot, capsicum and mushrooms: about 180 kcal a side serve and rich in vitamin C. Each vegetable is stir-fried in a few drops of oil, and the final seasoning has just a teaspoon of sugar.

Diet notes: Gluten-free with a swap: Sweet potato noodles are gluten-free; use tamari in place of the dark soy sauce.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Thinly slice the onion, julienne the carrot and capsicums, cut the green onion into 5 cm lengths, slice the shiitake and mince the garlic. Freeze the beef for 30–60 minutes so you can cut it into fine strips. 0:41
2. Toss the beef and shiitake with the garlic, a little of the soy sauce and sugar, some pepper and a splash of sesame oil; marinate about 10 minutes. 2:38
3. Heat a pan over medium-high. With about ½ tsp oil and a pinch of salt each time, stir-fry the onion (1–2 minutes, still crunchy), the green onion, the carrot and the capsicum separately, spreading each on a tray to cool. 3:19
4. Stir-fry the marinated beef and mushrooms in about 1 tsp oil until the beef is cooked, and spread out with the vegetables. 4:17
5. Bring 1 litre of water to the boil with 3 Tbsp dark soy sauce, 1 Tbsp brown sugar and 1 Tbsp oil. Cook the noodles in it until fully soft (not al dente), then drain. 4:46
6. Toss the noodles with 1 Tbsp sesame oil and let them cool to warm. Add all the cooked ingredients, the remaining soy sauce, sugar and pepper and toss by hand. Taste, add salt only if needed, and finish with sesame seeds. 5:35

> Tip Serves 8–10 as a side, or about 4 as a main. Time excludes 30–60 min freezing the beef to slice it (skip with pre-sliced beef). Keeps 3 days in the fridge; reheat in a pan with a teaspoon of oil or briefly in the microwave.
