Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Pulse the cauliflower florets in a food processor into fine rice. 0:24
2. Cook the cauliflower rice in a dry non-stick pan over medium-high heat for 7–10 minutes, stirring, until tender and no more steam rises. 0:34
3. Mix the warm cauliflower with the cream cheese, rice vinegar and erythritol (if using), then refrigerate for about 30 minutes until completely cold. 0:50
4. Meanwhile slice the salmon, avocado and cucumber, and stir the mayonnaise with the sriracha. 1:22
5. Lay a nori sheet shiny side down on a sushi mat. Spread a quarter of the rice over it, leaving a 1¼–2 inches strip bare at the far edge. Line up a quarter of the salmon, avocado and cucumber near the edge closest to you. 1:48
6. Roll up firmly with the mat, dab the bare edge with water to seal, and press the roll into shape. Repeat to make 4 rolls. 2:08
7. Cut each roll into 8 pieces with a sharp knife, wiping it clean between cuts, and top with the sriracha mayo. 3:30

> Tip One roll (8 pieces) is a serve. Use only sushi-grade salmon and eat it the day it is made. For spicy tuna rolls instead, mix a drained 5 oz can of tuna with 2 tbsp mayo, 1 tbsp sriracha and ½ tsp rice vinegar.
