The bread is made from almond flour and whey, so a serve has about 24 g protein, 7 g fibre and 8 g net carbs, sweetened only with Swerve and sugar-free syrup; the almonds make it rich in vitamin E.

Diet notes: Keto (8 g net carbs a serve).

Method

TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Whisk the almond flour, whey protein, Swerve, baking powder and xanthan gum in a medium bowl until evenly combined. 0:46
2. Stir in the water with a spatula until a thick, sticky batter forms, adding a little cinnamon if you like. 1:56
3. Coat a glass sandwich-size container with baking spray and spread the batter in evenly — a wet spatula stops it sticking. 2:15
4. Microwave 1 minute, check it doesn't overflow, then another minute, check again, then a final minute, until the top feels firm. Let it cool and set for a few minutes. 2:40
5. Turn the bread out, cut it in half through the middle with a thin bread knife, then into quarters to make 4 slices. 3:08
6. Whisk the eggs, almond milk, sugar-free maple syrup and a pinch of cinnamon with a fork until the yolks are fully mixed in. 3:19
7. Soak each slice in the egg dip, then cook in a pan coated with baking spray over medium heat, flipping often, until the egg is set. Serve with berries, sugar-free syrup, a dusting of Swerve and a pat of butter. 4:00

> Tip The cook's macros for 2 slices (no toppings): about 350 kcal and 3 g net carbs. Sunflower-seed or walnut flour also work instead of almond flour.
