Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. For the pastry, mix the 60 g almond flour, xanthan gum and salt, then stir in 36 g egg white until it forms an even dough. Cover with plastic wrap and set aside. 0:58
2. Beat the rest of the eggs. Weigh 20 g into a bowl (keep the rest for brushing) and stir in the sweetener, water, cream and a few drops of vanilla. Refrigerate this custard. 1:42
3. Melt the 30 g butter and stir in 36 g almond flour to make a soft butter paste. Butter 8 small egg-tart moulds, corners included. 2:40
4. Roll the dough between sheets of cling film into a thin rectangle, spread the butter paste over it, cover and roll gently, then roll it up tightly from the long side. 3:27
5. Cut the roll into 6 equal pieces. Flatten each one, lay it over an upturned mould, flip and let it settle in, then trim the edge with a decisive cut. Press the scraps into the last 2 moulds. 4:51
6. Brush the cases with beaten egg so the custard won't soak in. Bake at 170°C for 10 minutes, brush again and bake 5 minutes more. 6:03
7. Stir the custard, pour it into the cases and bake until the filling sets and browns in spots. 6:36

> Tip Use almond flour, not coconut flour, for the pastry (grind other nut flours finer). If the butter paste is too wet, add a little more almond flour.
