Method

TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Choose dark, glossy eggplants. Wash them and cut into lengths, then halve them so they steam evenly. 0:13
2. Soak the cut eggplant for about 1 minute in 2 cups of water mixed with 2 tbsp white vinegar; this keeps the skin purple and the flesh white. 1:11
3. Bring water to the boil in a steamer. Arrange the eggplant so steam can reach every piece, cover and steam on high heat for 5 minutes. 1:29
4. Let the eggplant cool a little, then tear it by hand into thin strips and pile it on a plate. 2:36
5. Top with the spring onion, garlic, Sichuan pepper, chilli powder (to taste) and salt. 3:22
6. Heat the oil until smoking and pour it over the aromatics so they sizzle. 3:35
7. Finish with the rice vinegar and sugar and toss everything together. 3:42

> Tip Serves 3 as a side (our estimate). A north-western Chinese cold dish; the video also shows a whole-fried version, but the steamed one is easier and uses far less oil. Good warm or cold.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Chinese) shows every step.
