Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Peel the thin skin off the liver, cut away any tubes and cut it into bite-size cubes. 0:25
2. Pound the garlic and ginger (with a pinch of salt) into a paste. Rinse the liver pieces well and drain them. 2:25
3. Toss the liver with 1 tsp each of ground coriander, cumin, chilli powder and black pepper, salt, 1 tbsp of the garlic-ginger paste, the lemon juice and 1½ tbsp oil. Set aside to marinate while you make the sauce. 3:20
4. Heat 2 tbsp oil in a wide pan and fry the chopped onions until soft and golden. 4:10
5. Stir in 2 tsp garlic-ginger paste with ½ tsp each of cumin and coriander, then add the chopped tomatoes and cook them down into a thick sauce. 5:00
6. Add the marinated liver, stir it through the sauce, cover and cook gently until just cooked through — overcooking makes liver tough. 5:50
7. Add the capsicum strips and the green chilli and cook a few minutes more, until the peppers are just tender. 6:30
8. Scatter with chopped coriander and serve. 8:05

> Tip Serves 4 (our estimate). Served in the video with chapati; ugali, a salad or greens also suit it. Liver is extremely high in vitamin A, so keep it to an occasional meal, and avoid it in pregnancy.

The method is a summary in our words, in English — the video (in Swahili) shows every step.
