Method

TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Heat the grill (broiler) with a shelf about 10 cm below it. Spread the tomatillos, unpeeled garlic and the stemmed jalapeño (halved, cut side down) on a baking tray. 0:33
2. Grill for about 6 minutes until blackened in spots, turn everything over and grill another 6 minutes, until the tomatillos are soft and olive-coloured and the garlic is soft. Let cool. 2:43
3. Peel the garlic and scrape everything, juices included, into a blender. Pulse to a coarse purée that still has some texture, then pour into a bowl. 3:19
4. Chop the white onion into small dice, rinse it under cold water in a sieve to tame its bite, and shake dry. Slice the coriander, stems and all. 6:03
5. Thin the salsa with a spoonful or two of water if it's too thick, season with salt, then stir in as much onion as you like and the coriander. 5:15

> Tip Makes about 350 ml (12 portions of 2 tbsp). Keeps a few days in the fridge; stir in the onion and coriander just before serving if making ahead. Boiling the tomatillos instead of roasting gives a brighter, tangier salsa.
