Steamed, not fried: about 26 g protein and 7 g net carbs a serve, with only 2 g added sugar from a teaspoon of sugar; rich in selenium and zinc from the pork.

Diet notes: Gluten-free with a swap: Use tamari instead of soy sauce, and dry sherry or a gluten-free rice wine instead of Shaoxing wine.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Heat a small pan, add 1 tbsp oil and, while it is warm rather than very hot, fry 2 of the minced garlic cloves until golden. Set aside with the oil. 1:20
2. Rinse the fermented black beans and pat them dry. Crush or chop half of them with the knife handle to release their flavour; keep the rest whole. 1:45
3. Mix the ribs with the potato starch slurry until silky, then add the Shaoxing wine and mix until absorbed. Add the soy sauce, sugar, black beans, raw garlic and pepper, then the sesame oil and the fried garlic with its oil. 2:15
4. Mix in the sliced chilli (or keep it to scatter on after steaming if you don't like heat) and marinate for at least 30 minutes, or overnight in the fridge. 3:05
5. Spread the ribs in a single layer on a plate with a slight rim to catch the juices. 3:44
6. Bring water to the boil in a steamer, put in the plate and steam over medium-high heat for 12 minutes. Turn off the heat and leave covered 4 minutes more; check the pork is cooked through. 3:55

> Tip Serves 2 with other dishes (our estimate). In Hong Kong it is eaten with rice or as dim sum; serve it with steamed greens for a lower-carb meal. You can marinate the ribs the night before.
