Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Soak the dried fava beans in plenty of water for about 10 hours or overnight, then drain. 0:16
2. Bring 2½ litres of water to the boil, add the beans and simmer for about an hour, stirring now and then, until they are so soft they start to fall apart. 2:37
3. Meanwhile boil the nopales in 1 litre of water with the salt, a tomatillo husk, a chunk of onion, a garlic clove and a few coriander sprigs for about 20 minutes, until tender. Drain and discard the husk and aromatics. 3:15
4. For the sofrito, heat the oil over medium-low heat and fry the onion until soft, then the garlic for a minute. Add the tomatoes and bay leaf, turn up the heat and cook about 6 minutes. Remove the bay leaf. 4:29
5. When the beans have cooked about 50 minutes and look thick, stir in ½ litre of hot water and simmer 10 minutes more. 6:27
6. Stir in the tomato sofrito, the nopales and the coriander, then salt little by little to taste. Simmer 10 minutes more, until as thick as you like. 7:12
7. Serve hot as a starter or a light meal. 8:48

> Tip Serves about 8 (our estimate for 500 g dried beans). Peeled, split habas cook fastest and need no skinning. The chef serves it with salty crackers; a green salad keeps it lighter. Freezes well.
