Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Blend the shallots, garlic, turmeric, candlenuts, white peppercorns and coriander seeds with 60 ml water into a smooth yellow paste. 1:23
2. Heat the oil over medium heat and fry the paste for a minute. Add the crushed galangal, ginger and lemongrass with the lime and salam leaves and stir another minute until fragrant. 2:10
3. Pour in the stock, add the chicken and bring to a boil, then simmer on medium-low for 45–60 minutes until cooked. Lift out the chicken, add ½ tsp salt to the broth and boil one more minute. 3:20
4. Shred the chicken with a fork or your fingers (the cook deep-fries it first for extra flavour, but says that is optional). Finely slice the cabbage, spring onion and celery leaves, slice the tomato and halve the eggs. 3:52
5. For the sambal, boil the chillies and garlic in a cup of water with a pinch of salt for 3 minutes, drain and blend with 2 tbsp of the soup. 6:05
6. Put noodles, chicken, cabbage, bean sprouts, spring onion, celery leaves, tomato, egg and a pinch of fried shallots in each bowl, ladle over the hot broth and serve with lime and the sambal on the side. 7:01

> Tip Make the broth a day ahead and keep the toppings separate. Fried shallots carry oil, so use just a pinch. Serves 4–6 according to the cook.
