Fatty and lean pork with a big pile of green chillies: about 24 g protein, 5 g fibre and 12 g net carbs a serve, with only a pinch of sugar. The chillies give more than a day's vitamin C.

Diet notes: Gluten-free with a swap: Use tamari for both soy sauces and a gluten-free oyster sauce.

Method TIMES = THE MOMENT IN THE VIDEO

1. Stem the green chillies and cut them into bite-size pieces; slice the small red chillies. Smash the green garlic and cut it diagonally. Smash and chop the garlic and ginger. 0:05
2. Slice the skinless pork belly as thinly as you can so it renders quickly. Slice the tenderloin thinly against the grain. 0:41
3. Marinate the tenderloin with a pinch of salt, a little pepper, 2 g light soy sauce and 2 g egg white. Mix in a little dry starch, then 1 tsp oil so the slices don't clump. 1:01
4. Heat a dry wok and stir-fry the green chillies over medium heat for about 2 minutes, pressing them, until blistered and wrinkly. Tip them out and clean the wok. 1:31
5. Heat the wok, swirl in some oil and pour the excess out. Stir-fry the pork belly for 1–2 minutes until it releases its fat, then add the tenderloin and toss until nearly cooked. 2:06
6. Add the chopped ginger and garlic and fry until fragrant. Season with 6 g oyster sauce, 4 g light soy sauce (poured down the side of the wok), a little sugar and pepper, and 2 g dark soy sauce for colour. 2:38
7. Return the chillies and toss to combine, then add the green garlic and stir-fry just until it wilts. No salt is needed beyond the sauces. 3:12

> Tip Serves 2 with rice (our estimate). For less heat use green bell peppers instead of erjingtiao. Cauliflower rice or a side of greens keeps the meal lower in carbs.
